We now have WU Brew!

But what is WU Brew? Chances are you are one of the 150 million Americans who drink coffee on a daily basis (worldwide, that’s 2.25 Billion cups per day) but are you aware that there are crucial environmental issues created by our species’ love for Java? In short, coffee used to be grown under a canopy of shade trees in tropical locales throughout the world. But as demand skyrocketed farmers learned that coffee would grow faster with more beans per bush in open fields in direct sun. This method yields lots more coffee at a reduced cost, but destroys tropical forests by clear-cutting, eliminates migratory bird habitats and requires heavy use of herbicides and pesticides. But along comes WU Brew. WU Brew is Widener’s own brand of organic coffee, shade grown in Costa Rica. It is a project of Widener University faculty, students and alumni. Widener Professor of Environmental Science Dr. Stephen Madigosky works with two Widener alumni, Frank Baldassarre and John Sacharok, owners of Golden Valley Farms Coffee Roasters of West Chester, to bring this organic, fair-trade, environmentally sound coffee to Widener. And now it is available at The Sidebar Café! So stop by and check it out. (A portion of sales go back to Widener for environmental research.)

Through the Law & Government Institute, Widener Law students may enhance their legal studies by completing the requirements for one of three certificates in government law. Each of the certificates requires students to gain experience in the field through an externship, to complete a concentration in government law courses, and to fulfill the law school’s writing requirement on a government law topic. A Law & Government Certificate signals that a student has completed in depth study of and has practical experience in government law. Government law includes lawyers who represent clients before the government and lawyers who represent the government itself.

Professor Jill Family, Professor of Law and Director, Law & Government Institute, will provide information and answer questions during these sessions.

FROM THE LIBRARY

Is it sometimes difficult to find a place for your study group to meet? One change made by the library over the summer was to make the study room adjacent to the wireless lab available for booking by groups of two or more students. If you have a study group and want to reserve a room equipped with a newly installed projection screen and comfy chairs, use the link under library services on the library’s homepage. Timeslots up to three hours may be reserved by groups of two or more law students. The reservation form can be found here:
